•For Diffusion of Knowledge.

The movement for a public library, he said, was started by the Richmond Educational Society some years ago. The modern conception of a public li-brary, he continued, was not that it is a storehouse of knowledge, but an implement for its diffusion among all classes of the community. In Louisville, Ky., with a population of 236, 600, he said, the annual circulation of books in the public library is 700,500; the number of those who attended the library 28,000, the number of card the number of those who attended the library, 28,000; the number of card holders, 42,000; the cost of the building, $450,000; the annual city appropriation, $60,000. He gave correspending figures from Nashville, Tenn., Grand Rapids, Mich., and Springfield, Mass, He said in Grand Rapids the card holders numbered about one-third of the population, and every book reaches from two to six persons in the city, so that nearly one-half of the population is reached by the library. In Nashville the library in a year reached thirty-six blacksmiths; 563 bookkeepers, 483 business, insurance and brokerage men; seventy carpenters, sixty-nine cash boys, 1,859 clerks and 2,000 laborers, 1,748 merchants and 741 business, copyright laws and municipal problems. In Newark, N. J., there problems. In Newark, N. J., there are books on every vocational trade in the city. So it is seen, Professor Metthe city. So it is seen, Professor Met-calf said, that a public library is a ne-cessity, not a luxury, and really does minister to the needs of the people.

An chaorate program had been arranged. Rev. T. McN. Simpson, presiding elder of Richmond District, offered the opening prayer, and was followed by Rev. W. J. Young, D. D., pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, who delivered the principal address, speaking on the subject, "Christ, the Corner-Stone of the Church." Appropriate music was rendered by the choir, and Rev. E. Virgil Carson, pastor of the new church, pronounced the What It Would Mean to Richmond.

CASE TO BE ARGUED

Men's Club yesterday in benait of the movement to establish a public library in this city it was stated that Richmond is the only city in the country having a population of 100,000 which is without a public library.

The table talk was presided over by Dr. J. A. C. Chandler. He said that the same need, which was admitted seven years ago when the subject of having a Carnegic library here was broached, applies now, and that a library was one of the most pressing needs of the day. He introduced Professor J. C. Metcalf, of Richmond College, as the first speaker, Professor Metcalf told of what public libraries have done for other cities.

The movement for a public library, The movement for a public library, and the London Water Gas Company, does not stand in immediate need of rehabilitation.
